About the Stephen Lewis Foundation

The Stephen Lewis Foundation (SLF) works with community-level organizations that are turning the tide of HIV/AIDS in Africa by providing care and support to women, grandmothers and the orphaned children in their care, and people living with HIV and AIDS. Since 2003, it has funded over 1100 initiatives, partnering with more than 300 community-based organizations in the 15 African countries hardest hit by the pandemic.

We, the grandmothers of Africa, speak to you now as guardians of the future. We will not let the AIDS pandemic defeat us nor destroy our communities... Africa cannot survive without us.

—Excerpt from the Grandmothers Call to Action
About the African Grandmothers Tribunal

“It’s time to recognize that grandmothers at the forefront of the HIV/AIDS crisis must have our human rights respected and protected... It’s time to recognize our contribution to the survival of communities and the expertise we have developed to do so, by giving us our rightful place and voice wherever decisions are made.”

—Excerpt from the Grandmothers Call to Action

African grandmothers are working to secure better futures for their communities. They have stepped in to care for orphaned grandchildren, putting them through school, supporting them through the loss of their parents to AIDS, and teaching them about HIV prevention and treatment. They tend to the sick, set up support groups, harvest the crops and create income-generating programmes. They are advocates for their families, and are emerging as experts and leaders, increasingly acknowledged by governments and international NGOs. But discrimination and gender inequality impose an unconscionable price.

On September 7th, 2013 in Vancouver, British Columbia, the Stephen Lewis Foundation hosted a People’s Tribunal to shine a public light on the denial of African grandmothers’ human rights, and to issue a call to action. Six grandmothers from Swaziland, Uganda, Kenya, Zimbabwe and South Africa presented their personal testimonies. Two leaders of community-based organizations in Swaziland and Uganda shared their expertise about some of the most pressing human rights challenges grandmothers are facing. All together, they sent out a clarion call for change before a panel of four Tribunal judges.

The Film

African Grandmothers Tribunal: Seeking justice at the frontlines of the AIDS crisis shines a light on the urgent need to provide better protection for the human rights of African grandmothers. The film centres on the inspiring stories of three African grandmothers who journey from their homes in Uganda and Swaziland to testify in front of the international community at a People’s Tribunal in Vancouver, Canada.

Featured Grandmother Testifiers

Thulisile Dladla, Swaziland
Thulisile is a dynamic and tireless advocate for her community. As an HIV positive grandmother and board member of SWAPOL, she runs a feeding programme for vulnerable children and provides home-based care to terminally ill community members.

Immaculate Nakyanzi, Uganda
After Immaculate lost many family members to AIDS, she assumed care for multiple grandchildren. She has become a voice for change around land rights, specifically the threat of violence and lack of legal redress associated with property grabbing and the eviction of grandmothers caring for orphaned children.

Mariam Mulindwa, Uganda
Mariam is the full-time caregiver for 24 orphaned and vulnerable children. In 2003, she joined PEFO, and quickly became a mobilizer and inspiration for other grandmothers, representing older persons on the sub-County Land Rights Committee.

Additional Testifiers

Grandmothers
Zodwa Ndlovu, South Africa
Magret Ongwen, Kenya
Mama ‘F’, Zimbabwe

Expert Witnesses
Robina Ssentongo,
Director, Kitovu Mobile AIDS Organization, Uganda
Siphiwe Hlophe,
Founder & Director, Swaziland Positive Living (SWAPOL), Swaziland

Judges
Gloria Steinem,
Renowned feminist author and activist
Joy Phumaphi,
Executive Secretary of the African Leaders Malaria Alliance
Theo Sowa,
Chief Executive Officer of the African Women’s Development Fund
Mary Ellen Turpel-Lafond,
British Columbia’s Representative for Children and Youth

“It’s time to recognize that grandmothers at the forefront of the HIV/AIDS crisis must have our human rights respected and protected... It’s time to recognize our contribution to the survival of communities and the expertise we have developed to do so, by giving us our rightful place and voice wherever decisions are made.”

—Excerpt from the Grandmothers Call to Action

African grandmothers are working to secure better futures for their communities. They have stepped in to care for orphaned grandchildren, putting them through school, supporting them through the loss of their parents to AIDS, and teaching them about HIV prevention and treatment. They tend to the sick, set up support groups, harvest the crops and create income-generating programmes. They are advocates for their families, and are emerging as experts and leaders, increasingly acknowledged by governments and international NGOs. But discrimination and gender inequality impose an unconscionable price.

On September 7th, 2013 in Vancouver, British Columbia, the Stephen Lewis Foundation hosted a People’s Tribunal to shine a public light on the denial of African grandmothers’ human rights, and to issue a call to action. Six grandmothers from Swaziland, Uganda, Kenya, Zimbabwe and South Africa presented their personal testimonies. Two leaders of community-based organizations in Swaziland and Uganda shared their expertise about some of the most pressing human rights challenges grandmothers are facing. All together, they sent out a clarion call for change before a panel of four Tribunal judges.

The Film

African Grandmothers Tribunal: Seeking justice at the frontlines of the AIDS crisis shines a light on the urgent need to provide better protection for the human rights of African grandmothers. The film centres on the inspiring stories of three African grandmothers who journey from their homes in Uganda and Swaziland to testify in front of the international community at a People’s Tribunal in Vancouver, Canada.